[redacted] Miss Laser, in the office of Representative Samuel Frieder (D., Md.), called to ask if the Agency had published a study on mainland China. I informed her that she probably has in mind the two volume study prepared by the Joint Economic Committee and suggested she get in touch with them. She thanked me for this information.

[redacted] Jay Sourwine, Senate Internal Security Subcommittee staff, called and said Senators Eastland, Thurmond, and possibly Hruska, would like to have a briefing on Cuban infiltration of Latin America. Sourwine would like to have himself, Frank Schroeder, and Ben Mandel also in attendance. Invitations would be issued to the entire membership of the subcommittee, but probably only the three would attend. The briefing would be in a closed session. The Senators desire the briefing in view of conflicting testimony received from witnesses to date in order to determine the future thrust of their hearings. I told Sourwine I thought we might be able to do something for him, but would first have to check and then report back.
